We wandered one April morn,
flurried and worried and angry,
While Mollie, serenely cool,
isid, "Jack, it's the first of AprilPlease don't be an April-"

"You're right," I said, in a passion
"For I am a fool to-day,
To care for a lair, faise woman
Who loves that she may belray,
I aw you riding with Charley;
I know I am only you'r tool;
And trysted this A pril meralog
To be called an April—"

"Husb, Jack! You're one of those love.
That never should trust their eyes;
And really your temper has been, sir.
A not very sweet surprise."
Then I looked at the fair caim maiden,
In her fresh spring garments dressel—
Tender green like the budding trees,
With violets at her breast.

Many Aprils have come and gone Since I won my little wife; As I was fooled that happy morn, She has fooled use all my life, But, oh! such folly is wisdom. April or May, as a rule: Happy's the man whom at his life A good little wife can fool.

Compulsory Education.
In Manchester, England, 50,000 people adults) can neither read nor write. This looks badly for enlightened Britain, but schools since 1870 has, in many localities, increased 35 or 40 per cent. The com-pulsory act is very rigidly enforced, as it ought to be wherever compulsion is the schools, and that no parent has a right to keep children from acquiring an educa-tion, is unassallable, and some day it will prevail throughout the United States.
